Arctic Shift is available as an alternative backend, which should have similar features. The main disadvantage is that you cannot do a fulltext search without setting either subreddit or author.
10/08/2025: While viewing comments of a post, it will now query the reddit api to highlight deleted comments in red. For performance reasons, this is currently only done for threads with less than 2000 comments. In addition it now supports reddit style links. 8 I feel like most of the SC'ers on Reddit are on US, and all the tournaments sound real fun ; (Is there a large portion of EU players doing their thang out here on EU? XD Great! I'm Diamond league Zerg, "Diamond light" I'd say, decent but not pro, I wanna refine my skills. Def looking for some good players to practice with, and some reddit tournaments would be awesome!! I'll stay tuned, my name on bnet is ggnewbz if you wanna practice or get some games on. :)

I don't enjoy smoking anymore ; _ ; Help!

Around when I turned 18 I used to smoke a lot. I started around friends that would peer pressure me into taking huge bong loads that were way over my limit, and as a result I would get stoned out of my mind. They were my best friends at the same, and I would go over there every day and just get blasted. I started to feel stupid, and worthless, and started drifting further and further away from myself. One day while smoking I had a panic attack that basically fucked me up for a long time. I think all of my repressed emotions just attacked me one day and I basically lost it for a good year or two, generalized anxiety disorder. In retrospect, I can see obviously that I should have only smoked what I was comfortable with and stood up for myself, but that is in the past. There were times, however, when I smoked more moderately with people I was more comfortable with, and I had a great time. Flash forward about six years; I am still coping with some aspects of the anxiety that was "unleashed" that day, but for the most part I am fine. I have smoked weed several times since the incident, but for the most part I just can't enjoy it. It is just so closely connected with the painful experience of my late teenage years... But I also remember the great times I had while high, it used to inspired me creatively and give me a great sense of ease when I was in a friendly environment. Now more often I am feeling the urge to get high with my SO and enjoy smoking like I once used to. But, whenever I try, there is always something in the way... Is smoking ruined for me? Should I just give up trying? Does anyone have a similar story, or any advice for getting over my psychological aversion to smoking? Thanks for reading :) <3 TL;DR I had an anxiety attack while smoking years ago, and since then smoking isn't the same. ; _ ;

I just switched to the EU server and I have no one to play with ; _ ; I used to play zerg but im trying a transition to terran, so I'm not out of control pro or anything, but I can carry my weight! Just looking for some cool people to practice with, play some team games, some randoms, some 1v1 scrimmages, whatever! We should have a reddit EU clan or something >_< My in game name is ggnewbz, add me! Let's play! Thanks :D I'll add all you guys!!!

I thought the 2nd game was especially troublesome... It's true that Nestea did make some mistakes, but he also played extremely well. He killed off so many reinforcements and took a huge risk establishing his early game economy. Yet he still lost to a 2 base terran... What are your guys' thoughts on this?

Comparing the cost and value of each race's defense.

Just a quick overview of each race's basic defenses: Zerg --Spine crawlers cost 100 minerals + drone and take 50 seconds to build. Spines lose value as the game continues. (Adds no army value) Terran --Bunkers are refundable and take 35 seconds --Tanks are basically the best defensive unit in the game, and they maintain or gain value as the game continues on (Adds army value) Protoss --Sentries, like tanks, are one of the best defensive units in the game, that maintain their value or gain more as the game continues on(Adds army value). Photon cannons cost the same amount as spines (100+50 for drone) build faster, detect, and can attack ground and air. Please, if you can, explain how this is balanced. Especially considering that zerg is supposed to be the reactionary race. Serious question. Am I thinking about this wrong?

Why Zerg is imbalanced.

http://www.reddit.com/r/starcraft/comments/g7uqj/why_zerg_is_imbalanced/

17 Comments

Each race has a certain feature that the player must keep up with properly: Terran has Mules, Protoss has Chrono Boost, and Zerg has inject larvae. This fundamental difference from Starcraft 1 is what I believe is one of the biggest balance challenges facing Starcraft 2. First of all, inject is by far the most punishing of the three abilities, if a Zerg player misses an inject, the punishment is far more resounding and will affect the entire game. Whereas protoss and terran can store up their energy and use their abilities at any time, they are not punished at all for missing timings unless they are severely off and get full mana. Terran has by far the easiest time, not only can they call down multiple Mules, but they can also call down supply. This acts as a crutch for mistakes, the Terran can make mistakes in timing and build order and their abilities forgive them almost completely for it. So here's the question -- If Protoss can use multiple Chronoboosts, and Terran can call down multiple mules, why can't zerg have multiple injects? I mean, if a Zerg player has perfect inject timing, their queen will be at zero energy anyway, so it would really only serve as a way to forgive non-perfect play. As it is now, the timing for mules and chronoboosts is not super critical, and is designed to be forgiving, unlike Zerg, whose entire tempo hinges upon good inject timing. I believe that either Zerg should be able to have multiple injects, or there should be some punishment for the other races for missing their timings, for example only being able to call 2 mules at a time, or only being able to use 2 chrono boosts at a time. This in my opinion is one of the biggest disadvantages facing Zerg.

Question from a total LoL noob - How skill based is LoL?

http://www.reddit.com/r/leagueoflegends/comments/q2f78/question_from_a_total_lol_noob_how_skill_based_is/

9 Comments

How skill intensive is LoL? Is it like WoW arena where people with the best gear have a huge edge? Or is it more like starcraft 2 where everyone starts on equal footing and it really all comes down to skill? Just curious! Thanks!

> I'm located in Israel and I play on the EU server, and I have unplayable lag during the day, like over 1000MS constantly. Is anyone else experiencing anything like this? It's really outrageous and upsetting, I can't believe this game is so unplayable. I'm 99% certain it isn't my connection, I've pinged their server and I get like 130ms, my connection is fine otherwise.

Life per hit with Wizard spells - Anyone know how it works?

http://www.reddit.com/r/Diablo/comments/u8gjz/life_per_hit_with_wizard_spells_anyone_know_how/

1 8 Comments

> Does anyone have definitive answers about how this works? I've noticed it does not work with blizzard or hydra, but with other spells like arcane orb, it does work, but I don't know if I gather life for the splash damage or just initial hit. I've also noticed that crit doesn't work on a lot of my spells. Seems like Wizards are so gimped, without crit and life on hit with so many spells, makes me a sad Wizard : (
